

Cosmic Truth

“All truth passes through three stages: First it is ridiculed; second, it is violently opposed; and third, it is accepted as self-evident.”

—Arthur Schopenhauer (1788-1860)

What is the truth of the Cosmos? In its most basic sense, the Cosmos is an orderly or harmonious system. It is divine order. I can certainly relate with the definition provided by Webster’s Online Dictionary which says the Cosmos is the; “extraterrestrial vastness or the Universe in contrast to the Earth alone where it is concerned with abstract spiritual or metaphysical ideas.” However, the more accurate description is given by philosopher Ken Wilber who defines it as “all of manifest existence, including various realms of consciousness.” In looking at the vastness and the multidimensional aspects of the Universe, it is almost mind boggling to fathom all of its complexities, possibilities and unknown realities. One must truly have an open mind when dealing with the Cosmos and its wondrous diversity. In my first book Ultimate Truth: Book 1 I write:

“If a library consisting of thousands upon thousands of volumes of books were the Cosmos, our Milky Way galaxy (which is one of billions of galaxies in the observable Universe), would comfortably fit within the size of a period mark in one of the many books.”

Believe it or not, our Sun is presumably only one of a 100 billion stars in this galaxy alone. In fact; notable Physicist and Nobel Prize winner Francis Crick believed there to be roughly 100 billion galaxies in our Universe postulating there are at least one million planets in our galaxy which could support life as we know it. Therefore, it is appropriate for us to know that ours is not the only form of intelligence in this vast Cosmological existence we call the Universe. There are far more beings than humans which have populated the Cosmos for eons. According to Hindu scriptures, there are inestimable Universes created by God to facilitate the implementation of the separated desires of countless living entities. Aside from the numerous Universes which are material, there is also the unlimited spiritual world, where the purified living entities live with perfect conception about life and ultimate reality. With our planet being roughly 4.5 billion years old, we are essentially infants in the cosmic realm. Our Universe is so rich and diverse with ranges, dimensions and vibrational octaves that we have only begun to experience life as intelligent beings.

You should know that there are layers upon layers of different realities and forms of existence happening simultaneously all around us at this very moment. Our minds cannot even begin to fathom the vast amount of possibilities that abound. In measurement, the Cosmos are considered to be at least 93 billion light years in diameter. That means it would take light traveling at 186,000 miles per second roughly 93 billion years to traverse it. Typically, the diameter of a galaxy is about 30,000 light-years, and the average distance between two neighboring galaxies is roughly 3 million light-years. In comparison, our Milky Way Galaxy is about 100,000 light years in diameter, and our nearest sister galaxy, the Andromeda Galaxy, is located nearly 2.5 million light years away. There are probably more than 100 billion of these galaxies in the observable Universe. The average galaxy ranges anywhere from ten million stars up to one trillion stars. An overall calculation from these numbers would suggest there are around one sextillion stars (that's 21 zeros) in the observable Universe; although a 2003 study by Australian National University astronomers resulted in a figure of 70 sextillion. But this is only the "observable" Universe. Science has determined that not only is there a Universe but a "Multiverse" meaning that ours is just one of countless unconnected Universes all of which are just as vast and diverse as the next. The ramifications of this are so far reaching, that we can't even begin to understand just how minuscule our perception of reality actually is. I'm just talking about the physical aspects on the 3rd density but I'm not taking into consideration the fact that there are other dimensions, each consisting of intricate and more elaborate forms of existence that we couldn't possibly be aware of. The adept truly knows that life and truth are not confined solely to this physical realm and planet.

Metaphysically speaking, there are actually 12 possible dimensions (science believes there are 11) each of which has 12 overtones. This means there are possibly 144 levels of reality of which we are only on the higher octaves of the 3rd level. How trivial we are to think that ours is the only intelligent life form. This is entirely presumptuous on the part of human beings. David Icke believes that the number of life forms in this galaxy alone is beyond imagination and that if we judge the possibilities only by what we see on this one little planet, in this one little solar system, our range of perception, imagination and vision will be so microscopic, that an understanding of what is really happening would be far too impossible to grasp. The truth is; the Cosmos encompasses the totality of everything that exists, including all physical matter and energy, the planets, stars, galaxies, and the contents of intergalactic space. Much of what we may consider to be bizarre or too far-fetched for reality is actually truth disguised as fiction. Unfortunately, our conditioning will not allow us to accept this information and so we've become cut-off from this esoteric type of information. Over time, our sense of awareness has atrophied to the point where we've become deadened to this form of understanding. It is only when we begin to allow this type of information back into our consciousness that we are able to jolt the memory codes imbedded within our DNA. I'm not just referring to the two-stranded coding but rather the additional strands that we're equipped with but have not been able to utilize. These missing strands, once reactivated, enable us to tap into the other 90% of our brains capacity. It's there; we just have to utilize it in order for it to become stimulated.

It takes a great deal of courage to entertain the notion that life as we know it is really just a fraction of what is happening in the Universe. In order to fully embrace the wisdom of these writings which requires a great deal of study and introspection, you must be open-minded to the degree that all forms of prior conditioning becomes openly challenged thus enabling you to reevaluate what you know about truth. You will come to find (just as I did) that your truth is minuscule in terms of "Cosmic Truth" and the vast amount of information that has been sequestered and hoarded by a select few in an effort to keep you ignorant and unaware.

There are billions of stars, millions of planets and countless levels of reality which we've never stopped to take notice of. Things are constantly occurring on different levels and degrees to include the mental realm, the astral realm and the physical realm. The mental realm alone expands as far as the imagination's span. But even this realm has become limited by what we perceive as possible or impossible. The astral realm reaches beyond our scope of reality and as humans we have been reduced to a tangible world where we believe only in what we can see with our physical eyes. And so our sight has become near-sighted to say the least because it's only based upon human experience. If our scope of awareness is limited only to human experience on the physical realm, then we're completely ignorant to a panorama of circumstances that continually happen all around us. We have become blinded for all intent and purposes. We have eyes but yet we do not see and ears yet we do not hear. Only 10% of the Universe is physical or knowable while the other 90% remains unseen. It is this 90% that actually governs controls and determines what happens to the other 10%. And since the cosmos are indicative of the human body with the Universe being the macrocosm and the human vehicle being the microcosm, we are similar to the Universe in that our brains only utilize 10% of its capacity; if that. Imagine what possibilities would abound to those of us that were better able to access the far reaches of the invisible Universe and in so doing, tap into the unchartered areas of the vacuum which we call "Mind."

There is a far greater truth to be told by venturing into the unknown recesses of Mind. By Mind I mean the "Cosmic Mind" which is the Universal brain. Within this brain lie all the answers that we've been seeking but have not yet been able to acquire. Our failure to obtain these precious gems of wisdom has been hindered by our inability to see beyond what is presented to us. We've been taught only to believe in what can be experienced through the five essential senses. Not to mention how we've become docile and conditioned through various means of mental control. These avenues are masquerading as truth in the form of organized religions, dogmas, doctrines, creeds and false and unfounded beliefs being promulgated by adherents of clandestine activities.
